PREFACE

Theoretically every endeavor to describe for the benefit of historical students any portion of an archive or other collection of historical manuscripts should likewise state, clearly and in detail, what portions of the material thus described are already accessible in print, or may be examined in transcripts nearer to the student, or otherwise more accessible, than the originals. The series of Guides to the Materials for American History in Foreign Archives which has been undertaken by the Department of Historical Research in the Carnegie Institution of Washington should, so far as is possible, be accompanied by such lists of documents accessible in print or in transcript. With such a list in hand the student can avoid the loss and mortification incident to journeys and searches in foreign countries for material which only duplicates that which he might readily have used at home. To such aid he is surely entitled, and without it the inventory of the archives loses much of its usefulness. In this sense the present book may be regarded as an accompaniment to Professor William R. Shepherd's "Guide to the Materials for the History of the United States in Spanish Archives."

Moreover, such lists may be extensively used by students who can not contemplate researches of their own in foreign archives. Relatively to the amount of the original documentary materials for American history which have been put into print, and to the amount of effort which is being made to write history from them, the means of connection between the documents and the student are sadly imperfect. For the furtherance of historical scholarship in America we have need of many more manual lists of the sort which in Europe are called regesta. The present book may prove to be a sufficiently complete list of one specific kind of materials to satisfy in a measure this want, in the important field of the study of Spanish relations to the present soil of the United States.

A considerable part of the labor involved in the collection of materials for the volume was performed by Miss Mary F. Griffin. The completion of this labor, and, in general, the compilation of the volume is due to Dr. James Alexander Robertson.

INTRODUCTION

The two lists contained in this volume concern the history of the territory included within the boundaries of the present continental United States. All matter touching that territory only indirectly and by inference as a part of the Indies has been rejected. The lists open appropriately with the expedition of Ponce de Leon in 1512; no documents bearing dates anterior to that period have been considered.

The first list consists of published material, the original manuscripts of which exist in Spanish archives or which, with good reason, are conjectured to exist in Spain. The method of listing has been as simple as possible, the following data being given for each document: date and place of writing, when known; short title, either in the original language (usually Spanish), or in English; archive or library, with pressmark (when known), where conserved; archives and libraries in the United States owning transcripts (when known), with pressmark; publication or publications in which printed, and whether in original or in translation, or in extract or abstract. No calendaring has been attempted, as this is designed to be a mere finding list.

In general, decrees, laws, etc., found in collections like the Recopilación de Leyes de Indias, have not been included. Most of such matter will probably be found in manuscript in the Archivo de Simancas, the Archivo Historico-Nacional, or the Archivo de Indias, but no source is as a rule indicated and its inclusion would swell the present volume beyond all proportion. Moreover, collections of this nature are well known and easily accessible.

Many documents published from Mexican archives exist as well in Spain, and the converse is true of documents published from Spanish archives—this being due to the duplicating system prevalent in Spanish official life. Hence, it is probable that some documents published, for instance, in collections like the various series of Icazbalceta, Documentos para la Historia de Méjico, exist in both Spain and Mexico. Such documents when published from Mexican archives are not listed here, but in the case of documents referring to the United States will be found to supplement this list. The student will also do well to consult books like Palau's Noticias de la Nueva California, which contain documents whose source is not indicated and which have not been included in this list. There have, however, been included various documents which Sparks published in his Diplomatic Correspondence from the copies kept by the writers. In this case, the real originals which were sent to the Spanish officials will beyond doubt be found in Spain. Further investigation in the public, religious, and private libraries and archives of Spain may, as is pertinently remarked by Lowery, bring to light the manuscripts of such early printed books as Acosta's Historia.

It is evident that the list of published documents defined in the preceding paragraph can not be said to be complete, and no such claim is made for it. Many books not mentioned here will be found to contain one or more documents from Spanish sources, but any attempt at an exhaustive list would be an unending and unsatisfactory task. This list pretends no more than to offer a practical working aid to the student of United States history.

The second list is much the longer of the two. It is a list of transcripts in libraries and archives in the United States from originals in Spanish archives. Data are presented as follows: date and place of writing, when known; short title, either in the original language or in English; place of conservation of original manuscript in Spain, and copies in Spain; place or places of conservation of transcript. For this list documents have been examined in the following libraries and archives: the Library of Harvard University; the Peabody Museum, Cambridge; the Boston Public Library; the Library of the Massachusetts Historical Society; the Library of Yale University; the Lenox Branch of the New York Public Library; the Library of the New York Historical Society; the Library of Congress; the Bureau of Rolls and Library, Department of State, Washington; the Riggs Library, of Georgetown University; the Library of the Louisiana Historical Society; that of the Wisconsin State Historical Society; that of the Missouri Historical Society, St. Louis; the library of Colonel R. T. Durrett, Louisville, Kentucky; the Department of Archives and History, of Jackson, Mississippi; the Texas State Library, Austin; and the Texas University Library, Austin. Inquiry has been directed to many other institutions. In cases where both transcripts and published forms exist, documents have been entered only in the first list, unless they have been published only in translation. In the latter case the document will be found noted in each list, with the necessary cross-reference, so that all the data may be readily ascertained.

The pressmarks accompanying some of the documents in the two lists are not those under which they will now be found, as in many instances a different classification has been adopted. For example, documents listed under e. 1, c. 1, will probably all be found now with the addition of legajo or bundle number. Some documents have even been transferred from one archive to another, e. g., notably from Simancas to Seville. Documents listed under Archivo de la Secretaría de Estado will probably be found either at Simancas, Archivo Historico-Nacional, Madrid, or Seville; those under Archivo de la Contaduría del Consejo Suprimido de Indias are probably in Seville; and the same is probably true of those under Archives of the War Office, Madrid.

Finally, for general information along Spanish-American lines, the student should consult the bibliographical notices in the various volumes of

H. H. Bancroft's histories. Bibliographies like those of Sommervogel, Bibliothèque des Écrivains de la Compagnie de Jésus (the valuable tenth volume of which has just been issued), and Marcellino da Civezza, Saggio di Bibliografia Sanfrancescana (Prato, 1879) are also useful.

The bibliographical list appended to this volume is of authors and titles cited in the various items of the lists.

Appreciative thanks are due to all those who have so courteously assisted in this work in all the institutions where inquiry has been made and investigations carried on. Special mention is made of Mr. William C. Lane, librarian of Harvard University; Dr. T. J. Kiernan, of the same institution; Professor F. W. Putnam, of the Peabody Museum; Mr. Worthington C. Ford, of the Massachusetts Historical Society; Professor Hiram Bingham, of Yale; Mr. Wilberforce Eames, of the Lenox Library, and his staff in general; Mr. William Kelby, of the New York Historical Society; Mr. Herbert Putnam, Librarian of Congress; Mr. Gaillard Hunt, chief of the Division of Manuscripts in the Library of Congress; the staffs in general of that division and of the Reading Room; the officials of the Bureau of Rolls and Library in the Department of State, Washington; Father Edward I. Devitt, S. J., and Father Henry J. Shandelle, S. J., of the Georgetown University; Mr. William Beer, of the Howard Memorial Library, New Orleans; Colonel Reuben T. Durrett and the officials of his library; Professor St. George L. Sioussat, of the University of the South; Dr. Reuben G. Thwaites and Dr. Louise P. Kellogg, of the Wisconsin State Historical Society; Mr. Irving B. Richman, of Muscatine, Iowa; the officials of the Missouri Historical Society; Mr. Louis Houck, of Cape Girardeau, Missouri; Mr. E. W. Winkler, librarian of the Texas State Library; and Mr. Frederick J. Teggart, of the University of California.

NOTES ON THE VARIOUS COLLECTIONS

All the documents at Harvard belong to the Sparks Collection. Many of them appear to be the originals, but they are properly listed here, as duplicates of them probably exist in Spain, so that they have in reality the position of transcripts (see Shepherd's Guide, 69, no. 3, regarding the correspondence of Miralles and Rendon, the letters in which are evidently the same as those at Harvard). The letters just mentioned, written for the most part during the American Revolution, constitute perhaps the most valuable part of the Sparks Collection, although the many documents touching New Mexican history are important. Some of the documents, part of those passing between the French, English, and Spanish ministers, were transcribed in London and Paris, from copies (generally in French) retained by the writers or from contemporaneous copies transmitted to those cities in the course of diplomatic negotiations. It may be stated almost positively that the originals of such papers exist in Spain. They have accordingly been entered with a query. The belief that their originals exist in Spain, and that they therefore have a proper place in this book, is given greater color by the existence of manuscripts transcribed in Spain for the Spanish scholar, Sr. Don Pascual de Gayangos, which are identical with some of those transcribed in London and Paris. In the case of Aranda letters, the matter may be followed up by consulting Nouvelles Archives des Missions Scientifiques et Littéraires, VIII. 456, 457.

Very little notice has been given to the Hemenway papers in the Peabody Museum. They relate especially to New Mexico and cover the period from Oñate's expedition in 1602 until within the eighteenth century. These transcripts were made in general from the archives of Mexico and New Mexico by Bandelier (see the Lowery Manuscripts, I., pp. 19, 20). The originals of those transcribed in New Mexico will now probably all be found in the Library of Congress, and while duplicates of many of them will doubtless be found in Spain, it has been deemed unwise to list them. A detailed list of Bandelier's transcripts is published in Catálogo de los Objetos Etnológicos y Arqueológicos exhibidos por la Expedición Hemenway (Madrid, 1892), pp. 77-115, and an English translation of those titles in Catalogue of the Hemenway Collection (Washington, 1895), pp. 305-376.

In the Lenox Library, most of the manuscripts examined belong to the Rich Spanish-American Collection, although some documents are found in the Bancroft and other collections (see Bulletin of the New York Public Library, July, 1901, for list of manuscript collections at the Lenox Branch).

It has been impossible in all cases to determine whether the documents are originals or transcripts, and whether the originals exist in Spain or Mexico. Some of them have accordingly been entered with queries, but where it has seemed reasonably certain that documents are not transcripts they have not been included. For certain documents copied from London and Paris, many of which are identical with those of similar nature in the Sparks Collection, see the statement made above concerning the latter collection.

The Buckingham Smith Collection contains all the transcripts possessed by the New York Historical Society. Many of them have been published in the original language and hence are given only in the first list. While the transcripts bear the mark of care and authenticity, pressmarks are omitted in some instances, although such documents come presumably from the Archivo de Indias. More serious is the carelessness with which some of the papers were arranged for binding, evidently by John Gilmary Shea, who had the use of the papers after Smith's death. In some cases parts of documents are missing, while in others the various sheets of one document are badly confused. Some transcription was done in Mexico, but such documents are not included in the list. In the volume lettered "North America MSS., 1500-1560", p. 335, are given a number of titles of manuscripts existing in the library of the University of Seville.

The principal papers in the Library of Congress are included in the Woodbury Lowery Collection, originally made by Mr. Lowery for his history of The Spanish Settlements in the United States. These comprise documents and titles (the latter not listed here unless the title as given by Lowery serves the purpose of a calendar) on the history of Florida, Louisiana, the Southwest, and California. It is in every respect an admirably made and valuable collection. The Papers collected by Professor William R. Manning for his work on The Nootka Sound Controversy (from Spanish, French, and English archives) have been lately deposited by him in the Library of Congress.

In addition the library possesses other transcripts from Spain, some made many years ago, and coming into the library from various sources, the Casas manuscripts for instance, belonging formerly to the Peter Force Collection. As in other libraries it is impossible to determine whether some are transcripts or the original manuscripts. The transcripts of the Brooks Collection relating to Florida, 1500-1800, comprising in all about two hundred pieces, are not included in the list because of their general inaccuracy, notwithstanding Lowery's optimistic remarks concerning them in the first volume of his manuscripts (pp. 20, 21). Many of them were dictated to the collector by one of the archivists of the Archivo de Indias, so that it would be very easy for error to creep in. English translations accompany the documents. Since many of them are found elsewhere their exclusion is not a serious matter.

The East Florida and New Mexico documents now conserved in the Library of Congress deserve mention. These were formerly the Spanish provincial archives, then later the United States territorial archives, but fortunately have been removed to the national repository. A comprehensive index and calendar is at present being made of these valuable papers, which are now easily accessible. Some of them exist in duplicate among the Cuban papers in Jackson, Mississippi. In some instances the papers in the Library of Congress are preferable to those in Spain, as the documents written in English were translated for transmittal to the mother country. They are not listed here. In the Library of Congress, the student should also consult B. F. Stevens's "Catalogue Index of Manuscripts in Archives of England, France, Holland, and Spain, relating to America, 1763-1783", especially the section of calendars. The titles are in part identical with those of this list, but some are supplemental to them. The documents in the Bureau of Rolls and Library in the Department of State at Washington are all contained in the collection called the Adams Transcripts, deposited there by Mr. Henry Adams.

The John Gilmary Shea Collection of transcripts and original letters is preserved in the Riggs Library, at Georgetown University. Documents contained therein have been transcribed from the Spanish archives at Simancas, Alcalá, and Seville; while others are from Cuba, Mexico, and the archives of the Propaganda in Rome. For want of pressmarks it is impossible to give the location of a number, and accordingly no attempt is made to list them. These documents were collected for use in writing the history of the Catholic Church in the United States.

The Louisiana Historical Society possesses transcripts relating mainly to the Lower Mississippi Valley, many of which are given in Gayarré's History, III., either in extract or in abstract. The Wisconsin State Historical Society owns documents relating to the Genet episode which are accompanied by translations. That library possesses also a portion of the Houck papers made from the transcripts collected for Mr. Louis Houck, of Cape Girardeau, Missouri, in the Archivo de Indias. Information concerning Spanish sources may be found in the bulletin of the Wisconsin State Historical Society, entitled Descriptive List of Manuscript Collections (Madison, 1906). The Missouri Historical Society possesses the Houck transcripts, most of which were made from the Cuban Papers in the Archivo de Indias. In addition to these, there are transcripts relating like them to the Upper Louisiana Country and the district northwest of the Missouri River. The collection in the library of Colonel Durrett at Louisville, Kentucky, consists of six volumes of Gardoqui papers. These were all copied from the Archivo Central de Alcalá, but their originals have since evidently been moved thence to the Archivo Historico-Nacional, Madrid, where they retain the same pressmark.

Among the papers of the Department of Archives and History of Jackson, Mississippi, is a notable collection of transcripts mainly copied from the Cuban Papers of the Archivo de Indias. They treat of the Floridas and Louisiana during the Spanish régime, that is, after 1763. All of them are eventually to be published. The only transcripts from Spanish archives in the library of Texas State University and in the Texas State Library are a few tracings of maps showing early explorations in Texas. Those in the former library it has been impossible to obtain in detail; those in the latter are listed in their proper places. The numerous transcripts from Mexican archives and the original documents of the Bejar archives in the library of the Texas State University, and the documents of the Nacogdoches archives in the Texas State Library, make these institutions necessary to the student for those districts.

While no documents have been listed from the valuable Bancroft Collection at the University of California, a word concerning it will not be out of place. This collection, the most valuable anywhere for the history of the Pacific Coast States, is now being indexed and calendared in part, and made available to students by the curator, Mr. Frederick J. Teggart. From a communication from the latter, it is learned that the collection contains about one thousand manuscripts for the history of Louisiana, mainly for the period of Baron de Carondelet's government. "They consist in part of copies made about 1882, and in part of originals, being principally reports and letters sent to the governor from commandants of the several towns under his control." Very little of the material of the collection was transcribed in Spain, but much comes from Mexican and Californian archives. Mr. Irving B. Richman, of Muscatine, Iowa, who recently examined the collection, believes that a volume of journals and accounts of voyages to the north (1774-1791) was wholly transcribed in Spain. Doubtless, as in so many cases, duplicates of some of the manuscripts of this collection will be found in Spain. It may be useful to mention that Mr. Richman has had many documents on Californian history transcribed in Spain, Mexico, Cambridge, the Library of Congress, and Berkeley, for use in various studies he has undertaken.

The manuscripts of the Ramirez Collection of rare books, and original and transcribed manuscripts, were scattered at the death of its collector, Señor Ramirez, the former Mexican politician. Some of the manuscripts contained matter relating to the United States, but it is probable that all were transcribed in Mexico. The Lenox Library possesses several pieces of the collection.

Most of the American papers collected by the Spanish scholar Don Pascual de Gayangos were presented to the Real Academia de la Historia by his daughter Señora Emilia de Riaño, although it had at first been her intention to present them to some institution in the United States, preferably Harvard University. The justice of her final choice must be commended.

The documents of the Muñoz, Salazar, and Boturini Collections, cited so frequently in these lists and all conserved in the Real Academia de la Historia, are transcripts for the most part from manuscripts in Simancas and Seville. The hastily-made and imperfect index to the latter collection is sometimes known as the Revilla-Gigedo folio (see Lowery MSS., I., p. 10). The documents in the Navarrete Collection conserved in the Depósito Hidrográfico of Madrid, are also mostly transcripts.
